POETRY.

YOUNG KATE.

BY GEORGE D. PRENTICE.

Young Kate, there is a witching spell
In thy sweet name and sweeter face;
And hearts and tongues with raptured well
Upon thy loveliness and grace;
For, lovely girl, thou seem'st to be
All music, love, and poetry.

Across thy cheek, in thy young glee,
I've watched thy wild thoughts come and go
Like rose-hues on the evening sea
Or sunsets shadows on the snow—
While thy young soul looked from thine eyes
Like a sweet cherub from the skies.

Naught ever shades thine eyes' rich blue
Save those young curls as bright and fair
As if the sunshine, glancing through,
Had chanced to get entangled there.
Ah! nobler hearts than wealth e'er bought
In those bright meshes will be caught.

And, Kate, guard well thy heart—for they,
To whom such spells as thine belong,
Are flattered by the wild and gay
And wooed by fashion's glittering throng.
But whatsoe'er may be thy fate,
God's blessing on thee, lovely Kate.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AN ILLUSTRIOUS EXILE.

AN AUSTRALIAN SKETCH.

A few years ago I made the acquaintance of an elderly lady, whose husband, so far back as 1799, held an official position, both civil and military, in the colony of New South Wales. Many anecdotes she told me of celebrated characters who had in the words of one of them, 'left their country for their country's good.' With most, if not with all of these celebrities, the old lady had come in contact personally.

'One morning,' she began, 'I was sitting in my drawing-room with my two little children, who are now middle-aged men with large families, when a gentleman was announced. I gave the order for his admission: and on his entering the door of the apartment I rose from my chair and greeted him with a bow, which he returned in the most graceful and courtly manner imaginable. His dress was that of a person who had moved in the highest circles of society. A vessel had arrived from England a few days previously with passengers, and I fancied that this gentleman was one of them. I asked him to be seated. He took a chair, opposite to me, and at once entered into conversation, making the first topic the extreme warmth of the day, and the second the healthful appearance of my charming children—as he was pleased to speak of them. Apart from a mother liking to hear her children praised, there was such a refinement in the stranger's manner, such a seeming sincerity in all he said, added to such a marvellous neatness of expression, that I could not help thinking he would form a very valuable acquisition to our list of acquaintances, provided he intended remaining in Sydney, instead of settling in the interior of the colony.

'I expressed my regret that the major (my husband) was from home; but I mentioned that I expected him at one o'clock, at which hour we took luncheon; and I further expressed a hope that our visitor would remain and partake of the meal.—With a very pretty smile (which I afterwards discovered had more meaning in it than I was at the time aware of,) he feared he could not have the pleasure of partaking of the hospitalities of my table, but with my permission, he would wait till the appointed hour—which was then near at hand. Our conversation was resumed; and presently he asked my little ones to go to him. They obeyed at once, albeit they were shy children. This satisfied me that the stranger was a man of kind and gentle disposition. He took the children, seated them on his knees, and began to tell them a fairy story, (evidently of his own invention, and extemporised, to which they listened with profound attention. Indeed, I could not help being interested in the story, so fanciful were the ideas, and so poetical the language in which they were expressed.

'The story ended, the stranger replaced the children on the carpet, and approached the table on which stood, in a porcelain vase, a boquet of flowers. These he admired, and began a discourse on floriculture. I listened with intense earnestness, so profound were his observations. We were standing at the table for at least eight or ten minutes; my boys hanging on to he sk irt of my dress, and every now and then compelling me to beg of them to be silent.

'One o'clock came, but not the major.—I received, however, a note from him, written in pencil on a slip of paper. He would be detained at the Government House until half-past two.

'Again I requested the fascinating stranger to partake of luncheon, which was on the table in the next room; and again, with the same winning smile, he declined. As he was about, as I thought, to depart, I extended my hand, but, to my astonishment, he stepped back made a low bow, and declined taking it.

'For a gentleman to have his hand refused when he extends it to another, is embarrassing enough, but for a lady! Who can possible describe what were my feelings? Had he been the heir to the British throne, visiting that penal settlement in disguise, (and from the stranger's manners and conversation he might have been that illustrious personage,) could scarcely have, under the circumstances, treated me in such an extraordinary manner. I scarcely knew what to think. Observing, as the stranger must have done, the blood rush to my cheeks, and being cognizant, evidently, of what was passing through my mind, he spoke as follows:

'Madam, I am afraid you will never forgive me the liberty I have taken already. But the truth is, the passion suddenly stole over me, and I could not resist the temptation of satisfying myself that the skill which made me so conspicuous in the mother country still remained to me in this convict land.'

'I stared at him, but did not speak.

''Madam,' he continued, 'the penalty of sitting at table with you, or taking the hand you paid me the compliment to proffer me—yourself in ignorance of the fact I am about to disclose—would have been the forfeiture of my ticket-of-leave, a hundred lashes and employment on the roads in irons. As it is, I dread the Major's wrath; but I cherish a hope that will endeavor to appease it, if your advocacy be only a return for the brief amusement I afforded your beautiful children.'

''You are a convict?' I said, indignantly, my hand on the bell-rope.

''Madam,' he said, with an expression of countenance which moved me to pity in spite of my indignation, 'hear for one moment.'

''A convicted felon, how dared you enter my drawing-room as a visitor?' I asked him, my anger again getting the better of all my other feelings.

''The Major, madam,' said the stranger, 'requested me to be at his house at the hour when I presented myself: and he bade me wait if he were from home when I called. The major wishes to know who was the person who received from me a diamond necklace which belonged to the Marchioness of Dorrington, and came into my possession at a state ball some four or five years ago—a state ball at which I had the honor of being present. Now, madam, when the orderly who opened the front door informed me that the Major was not at home, but that you were, that indomitable imprudence which so often carried me into the drawing-room of the aristocracy of our country, took possession of me; and, warmed as I was with generous wine—I determined to tread once more on a lady's carpet, and enter into conversation with her. That much I felt the Major would forgive me; and, therefore, I requested the orderly to announce a gentleman. Indeed, madam, I shall make the forgiveness of the liberties I have takan in this room, the condition of my giving that information which shall restore to the Marchioness of Dorrington the gem of which I deprived her—a gem which is still unpledged, and in the possession of one who will restore it on application, accompanied by a letter in my hand writing.'

'Again I kept silence.

''Madam!' he exclaimed, somewhat impassionedly, and rather proudly, 'I am no other man than Barrington, the illustrious pick-pocket; and this is the hand whsch in its day has gently plucked from ladies of rank and wealth jewels which realized, in all, upwards of thirty-five thousand pounds, irrespective of those which were in my possession, under lock and key, when fortune turned her back upon me.'

''Barrington, the pickpocket.' Having heard so much of this man and of his exploits, (although, of course, I had never seen him) I could not help regarding him with curiosity; so much so, that I could scarcely be angry with him any longer.

''Madam,' he continued, 'I have told you that I longed to satisfy myself whether that skill which rendered me so illustrious in Europe still remained to me in this country, after five years of desuetude. I can conscientously say that I am just as perfect in the art, that the touch is just as soft, and the nerve as steady as when I sat in the dress-circle at Drury Lane or Covent Garden.'

''I do not comprehend you, Mr. Barrington,' I replied. (I could not help saying Mister.)

''But you will in one moment. Where are your keys?'

''I felt my pocket, in which I fancied they were, and discovered that they were gone.

''And your thimble and pencil-case, and your smelling-salts? They are here.'—(He drew them from his coat-pocket.)

'My anger was again aroused. It was indeed, I thought, a frightful liberty for a convict to practice his skill upon me, and put his hand into the pocket of my dress. But, before I could request him to leave the room and the house, he spoke again; and, as soon as I heard his voice and looked in his face, I was mollified, and against my will, as it were, obliged to listen to him.

''Ah, madam,' he sighed, 'such is the change that often comes over the affairs of men! There was a time when ladies boasted of having been robbed by Barrington. Many whom I had never robbed gave it out that I had done so; simply that they might be talked about. Alas! such is the weakness of poor human nature that some people care not by what means they associate their names with the name of any celebrity. I was in power then, not in bondage. 'Barrington has my diamond earrings!' once exclaimed the old Countess of Kettlebank, clasping her hands. Her ladyship's statement was not true. Her diamonds were paste, and she knew it, and I caused them to be returned to her. Had you not a pair of very small pearl-drops in your ears this morning, madam?'

'I placed my hands to my ears, and discovered that the drops were gone. Again my anger returned, and I said, 'How dared you, sir, place your fingers on my face?'

'Upon my sacred word and honor, madam,' he replied, placing his hand over his left breast, and bowing, 'I did nothing of the kind! The ear is the most sensitive part of the human body to the touch of another person. Had I touched your ear my hope of having these drops in my waistcoat pocket would have been gone. It was the springs only that I touched, and the drops fell into the palm of my left hand.' He placed the ear-rings on the table, and made me another low bow.

'And when did you deprive me of them?' I asked him.

'When I was discoursing on floriculture, you had occasion several times to incline your head towards your charming children and gently reprove them for interrupting me. It was on one of those occasions that the deed was quickly done. The dear children were the unconscious confederates in my crime—if crime you still consider it—since I have told you, and I spoke the truth, that it was not for the sake of gain, but simply to satisfy a passionate curiosity. It was as delicate and difficult an operation as ever I performed in the whole course of my professional career.'

'There was peculiar quaintness of humor and of action thrown into this speech; I could not refrain from laughing. But, to my great satisfaction, the illustrious pickpocket did not join in the laugh. He regarded me with a look of extreme humility, and maintained a respectful silence, which was shortly broken by a loud knocking at the outer door. It was the major, who, suddenly remembering his appointment with Barrington, had contrived to make his escape from Government House, in order to keep it. The Major seemed rather surprised to find Barrington in my drawing-room; but he was in such a hurry, and so anxious, that he said nothing on the subject.

'I withdrew to the passage, whence I could overhear all that took place.

'Now, look here, Barrington,' said my husband, impetuously, 'I will have no more nonsense. As for a free pardon, or even a conditional pardon, at present, it is out of the question. In getting you a ticket-of-leave I have done all that I possibly can; and, as I am a living man, I give you fair warning that if you do not keep faith with me, I will undo what I have already done. A free pardon! What? Let you loose upon the society of England again? The Colonial secretary would scout the idea, and severely censure the governor for recommending such a thing. You know, as well as I do, that if you returned to England to-morrow, and had an income of five thousand a year, you would never be able to keep those fingers of yours quiet.'

'Well, I think you are right, major,' said the illustrious personage.

'Then you will write that letter at once?'

'I will. But on one condition.'

'Another condition?'

'Yes.'

'Well, what is that condition? You have so many conditions that I begin to think the necklace will not be forthcoming after all. And, if it be not, by——'

'Do not excite yourself to anger, major. I give you my honor——'

'Your honor! Nonsense. What I want is, the jewel restored to its owner.'

'And it shall be, on condition that you will not be offended, greviously offended with me for what I have done this day.'

'What is that?'

'Summon your good wife, and let her bear witness both for and against me.'

'My husband opened the drawing-room door, and called out 'Bessie!'

'As soon as I had made my appearance, Barrington stated the case—all that had transpired—with minute accuracy; nay, more, he acted the entire scene in such a way that it became a little comedy in itself; the characters being himself, myself, and the children, all of which characetrs he presented with such humor, that my husband and myself were several times in fits of laughter. Barrington, however, did not even smile. He affected to regard the little drama (and this made it the more amusing) as a very serious business.

'This play over, my husband again put to Barrington the question: 'Will you write that letter at once?'

'Yes,' he replied, 'I will; for I see that I am forgiven the liberty I was tempted to take.' And seating himself at the table he wrote:

'Mr. Barrington presents his compliments to Mr.——and requests that a sealed packet marked DN. No. 27, be immediately delivered to the bearer of this note. In the event of this request not being complied with, Mr. Barrington will have an opportunity ere long of explaining to Mr. ——, in Sydney, New South Wales, that he (Mr.——) has been guilty of an act of egregious folly.'

'Fourteen months passed away, when one morning my husband received a letter from a gentleman in the Colonial Office.—He clapped his hands, cried 'Bravo!' and then read to me as follows:

'My Dear Major—The great pickpocket has been as good as his word. My lady is again in possession of her brilliants.—Do whatever you can for Barrington once the colony; but keep a sharp eye on him, least he should come back and once more get hold of that necklace.'

'My husband sent for Barrington to inform him of the result of this letter, and he took an opportunity of asking the illustrious man if there were any other valuables which he would like to restore to the original owners.

'Thank you—no!' was the reply. 'There are, it is true, sundry little articles in safe custody at home; but, as it is impossible to say what may be in the future, they had better for the present stand in my own name.'

Guard Aganist Vulgar Language.—There is as much connection between the words and thoughts as there is between the thoughts and the words; the latter are not only the expression of the former, but they have a power to re-act upon the soul, and leave the stain of their corruption there.—A young man who allows himself to use one vulgar and profane word, has only shown that there is a foul spot upon his mind, but by the utterance of that word he extends that spot and inflames it, till by indulgence it will pollute and ruin the whole soul. Be careful of your words as well as your thoughts. If you can control the tongue that no improper words are pronounced by it, you will soon be able to control the mind, and save that from corruption. You extinguish the fire by smothering it, or by preventing bad thoughts bursting out in language. Never utter a word anywhere which you would be ashamed to speak in the presence of the most refined female or the most religious man—Try this practice a little while, and you will have command of yourself.

☞ Do you remember the story of Frederick the great and the sentinel on a very cold winter night?

'Why don't you smoke?' asked the king, incog.

'It is against orders—musn't,' replied the sentinel.

'Oh, but you may—I give you leave.'

'Can't help it, I musn't.'

'I tell you, fool, that I will bear you harmless—I am the king.'

And what said the sentinel to that?

'The king be d———d, what would my captain say?'

Moral: Always obey you immediate superior.

Shall I Be One of Them?—How divinely full of glory and pleasure shall that hour be, when all the millions of mankind that have been redeemed by the blood of the Lamb of God shall meet together and stand around him, with every tongue and every heart full of joy and praise! How astonishing will be the glory of that day, when all the saints shall join together in one common song of gratitude and love, and of everlasting thankfulness to their Redeemer! With what unknown delight and inexpressible satisfaction shall all that are saved from the ruins of sin and hell address the Lamb that was slain, and rejoice in his presence!—Dr. Watts.

THE TWO FOOLS.

When quite a small boy, like most other youths, I had a great inclination to attend all the shows, circuses, negro dances, concerts, &c., that came along. On one occasion I was very much amused at the wit of the clown, who was convulsing the crowd by his grotesque appearance and witty sayings. After a while he said something the crowd did not consider very 'funny,' and at which no one laughed, when a drunken man, no longer able to hold his tongue, cried out, 'You're a fool.'

'True,' responded the clown, 'and so are you, the only difference between us is, I am a fool for money, and you are a fool for nothing.'

Though quite young, the reply of the clown made a deep impression, on my mind, and I determined to profit by it.—In after life, I have generally found that it required more fools than one to carry on successfully what was readily condemned as foolish.

Now, whenever I see large playcards stuck up, announcing the arrival of 'strange animals,' 'unrivalled circus,' 'wonderful attraction,' &c., I invariably think of the saying of the clown, 'I am a fool for money, and you are a fool for nothing,' and stay away. There is generally but one clown, but a great many of the others.

When I see advertised in the paper, 'splendid lottery schemes,' 'sixty thousand dollar prizes,' &c., I think of the clown's two fools, and how many buy and but one sells, excuse myself from buying a ticket. One 'is a fool for money,' the other is 'a fool for nothing.'

When I pass a splendid saloon, with decanters of sparkling wines and brandies set around in the most inviting manner, with smiling clerks ready to hand you 'a glass,' I am sure to think 'there is a fool for money,' and as the deluded wretched crowd around the counter, 'these are fools for nothing.'

When I hear of some 'divine' woman going about singing Italian songs, and soon paying from ten to four hundred dollars a night for seats to hear, and when they cannot understand one word of it, I think of the 'two fools,' and keep my money in my pocket.

'In short, sir, whenever any 'unusual attraction,' any 'rare chance for speculation,' offers, I suspect at once that if I take hold of it, there will be another fool at the other end.

Do Right. A man who has a soul worth sixpence, must have enemies. It is utterly impossible for the best man to please the whole world, and the sooner this is understood, and position taken in view of the fact, the better. Do right, though you have enemies. You cannot escape them by doing wrong; and it is little gain to barter away your honor and integrity, and divest yourself of moral courage to gain—nothing. Better abide by the truth—frown down all opposition, and rejoice in the feeling which must inspire a free and independent man.

Pat's Answer to a Know Nothing.—'Well, Patrick, ain't you going to vote for Goggin?'

'What for will I vote for him?'

'Why he's kin to you Irishmen he says.

'Do ye think I'll be voting for him when he's gone and disgraced his kin, the ugly spalpeen?'

MR. JOHNSON.

As several gentlemen were passing down one of our southern rivers, a short time since, on board one of the thousand steamers which ply on their waters, one of them was struck with the beauty of an elegant farm which was then in sight, and addressing a plain rustic gentleman who stood at his elbow, asked who that elegant place belonged to.

'Mr. Johnson is the owner,' was the reply.

'Well, Mr. Johnson has a splendid farm,' returned the gentleman.

Presently another plantation attracted the attention of the gentleman, and the rough-looking man, again applied to for name of the proprietor.

'Mr. Johnson is the owner,' said the man.

'Indeed? The same man that owns the other? What a fortunate man this Mr. Johnson must be to have two such establishments as these.'

A third, a fourth, and a fifth plantation fell under the notice of the gentleman, and in reply to their questions they were informed that they also belonged to Mr. Johnson.

'And who takes care of all these farms for Mr. Johnson?'

'I take care of them,' answered the plain-looking gentleman.

'Well it must be a great deal of trouble, and he ought to pay you well for it.'

'He does not, if he ought,' said the man.

'What does he give you?' asked the gentleman.

'Only gives me my victuals and clothes,' said the gentleman, who happened to be Mr. Johnson himself.

'Only your victuals and clothes for doing all that! Why, he must be too mean a man to live!'

ELIZABETH CITY:

TUESDAY MORNING, MAY 31, 1859.

First Congressional District.

FOR CONGRESS:

HENRY M. SHAW,

OF CURRITUCK.

OUR NOMINEE.

The Democratic Convention which met in Edenton on Thursday, designated as the standard bearer of the party in the present campaign, the Hon. H. M. Shaw, and we to-day place his name at the head of our columns, determined to battle earnestly, zealously, and with what ability we possess, until the day of election, to secure his triumph. In supporting Dr. Shaw for a seat in the next Congress, we are not actuated by any other consideration than what we regard as the public good. Though respecting and esteeming the man, did we not believe his election calculated to assist in promoting the common welfare, we would not lift our finger to effect his success; but, regarding it as essential to the well being of our country and to the perpetuity of our institutions that the principles of the Democratic party should be the basis of our governmental policy, and knowing Dr. Shaw to be identified with and devoted to the support and advocacy of those principles, we cheerfully and heartily respond to the action of the Convention, and enter the list as an active laborer in his behalf.

No man in the district deserves more of his party than Dr. Shaw. In the hour of despondency, when the district seemed irretrievably lost; when all hope of redeeming it from the hands of our enemies appeared but the scheme of some visionary enthusiast; when none other could be induced to accept the leadership of the 'forlorn hope,' he seized the banner of his party, and waving it aloft, marched forward to the fight, and by his Herculean efforts planted it safely upon the ramparts of the enemy's citadel.

Two years later, he was defeated through the instrumentality of the miserable and odious Know Nothing humbug, but he fell nobly defending the principles of the Democratic party. Again, in 1857, he was nominated for re-election, in opposition to the most popular and able man in the ranks of Know Nothing-whiggery, and once more came off victorious, notwithstanding the desperate and vindictive warfare that was waged against him. Of his course in Congress, it is needless for us to speak.—None have been found to condemn it; a violent partisan press by its silence has said it had no fault to find. He has been true to the South in the hour of her peril, true to the country, and true to the time honored principles of the Democratic party.

In 1859 he stands arrayed against the same man that he defeated in 1857—a man that comes before the people as the candidate of a party without a principle—and appeals to them for their suffrages upon the basis of a single resolution which a body composed of 'incongruous material' had fixed up to gull and dupe them with.

Dr. Shaw will plant himself firmly upon the platform of the Convention which nominated him; and to his support will rally every democrat in the district.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

The delegates from the thirteen counties composing this Congressional district, assembled in Edenton on the 26th, Thursday, for the purpose of re-nominating their late able and distinguished representative, the Hon. H. M. Shaw, for a seat in the next House of Representatives. It was evident to us as soon as we reached Edenton and had conversed with our brother democrats from the various portions of the district, that the fire of Democracy was burning brightly in their hearts, and that they had come up to the work animated by a warm and ardent love of those great principles for which they have ever battled, and that now stand out in proud contrast to the miserable, shuffling, non committal, and evasive policy of the many-named faction that arrays itself in opposition. There was an earnestness, a zeal, an enthusiasm prevailing among them that added impulse to our own warm feelings, and told us of a brilliant and glorious victory in August next. Never have we seen men more fully aroused to the importance of vigorous, united, and energetic action; never have we known democrats so stirred in behalf of their glorious and undying principles; never have we known them so determined upon crushing out the wretched humbug of a concern that, made up—to use the language of a Winton Convention orator—of the most 'incongruous material,' assumes for itself the dignity of a party. When the Convention assembled, and we cast our eyes over the multitude composing it—a multitude of intelligent, honest, hard fisted, and patriotic Americans—and beheld the countenances of all present lighted up with the fires of a pure and sincere devotion to a good cause that blazed within, we must confess that we felt GOOD, HAPPY, JOLLY, and in love with all the world and the rest of mankind, the last of which refers to the 'Opposition.'

Notwithstanding there was no competition for the nomination, and that Dr. Shaw was the only candidate before the Convention, there were present ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-NINE delegates, every county in the district being represented. Had the honor been contested, and more than one aspirant in the field, this district would never before have witnessed such an outpouring of the Democracy, and the Winton Convention, with its hosts of aspirants, and its two hundred and seventy five delegates, would have been but a small affair in comparison. It was a noble gathering, and evinced the spirit and order that is abroad in the party.

That whole souled, zealous, and unflinching democrat, W. F. Martin, was called to preside over the deliberations of the Convention, an honor well deserved and properly bestowed. Mr. Martin, upon taking the chair, handsomely returned his thanks, and briefly addressed the Convention in a manner that infused into every one present the spirit that filled his own manly and patriotic bosom; after which, the business of the Convention was harmoniously proceeded with. The morning session was occupied principally in organizing and listening to a speech from Mr. Martin, who, upon the retirement of the Committee upon resolutions, was loudly and vociferously called for, and responded in a happy and effective effort. Indeed, we have never before seen Mr. Martin more animated, eloquent or forcible, he was fully himself, and his remarks elicited from the Convention the most unbounded applause. Upon the close of Mr. Martin's address, the resolutions or platform were reported and adopted—unanimously adopted. They speak for themselves; there is neither concealment, equivocation, or circumlocution in any word, letter, or line; but a bold, open, and explicit declaration of the principles of the Democratic party.

The Convention adjourned for dinner, and upon re-assembling, proceeded to make the nomination. E. C. Hines, Esq., of Edenton, proposed the Hon. H. M. Shaw, of Currituck, as the candidate of the Democracy of the 1st Congressional district, for a seat in the next National Legislature, and the thunders of applause that went up at the announcement of the name, fairly shook the walls of the staunch old building in which the Democracy were congregated, and evinced the unshaken confidence and sincere attachment of the Democracy for that fearless, able, and independent champion of their principles. Quiet being restored, the balloting commenced, and as the vote of each county was cast, cheer followed cheer until the result was proclaimed, when one burst of enthusiastic delight again caused the old hall of Justice to tremble to its base. Such demonstrations of ardent admiration were never before witnessed by us, and the gallant Shaw may, till the close of life, proudly turn to the 26th of May, and feel amply compensated for all his labors. It was a tribute to his worth that should never be forgotten. There was not a dissenting voice in the Convention,—not a democrat there that did not cheerfully and cordially give his vote for Dr. Shaw, and those cast for him were the free will offering of a noble and intelligent constituency.

After the nomination, the Convention was addressed by Messrs. Starke, Hines, Peebles, Simmons, Moore, of Hertford, Moore, of Chowan, Johnson, and it is only necessary for us to say that each and all of these gentlemen acquitted themselves handsomely and to the satisfaction of all present, as was evident from the unbounded applause which greeted their remarks. The "Opposition" came off worsted, and as the deception, trickery, and hypocricy of Know Nothingism, with its various aliases was exposed, and the dissection of its hideous carcass was going on, we almost felt pity for its disciples who were present witnessing the operation. Our sympathy was checked, however, by the reflection that they got nothing that they had not deserved fifty times over.

After the appointment of the necessary committees and canvassers for each county, the Convention adjourned about 11 o'clock with a round of hearty cheers for the indomritable standard bearer of the Democracy, HENRY M. SHAW, of Currituck.

CANVASSERS.

The Edenton Convention appointed three canvassers to each county, and their names will be found in the proceedings. Let them perform their duty faithfully, keep the people advised of the tricks of the enemy, their refusal to trust them with its designs or intentions, and its perfect contempt for the intelligence of the populace as manifested by the action of the Winton Convention. Place the truth before the masses, give them the record that they may see the game which Know Nothingism is attempting to practice upon them, and your labors will be blest by the triumphant election of your candidate in August. Go to work immediately, and work until the day of election, and fear not for the result.

☞ It is requisite that our friends should stir themselves in behalf of the papers in the district which are advocating their principles. Know Nothing sheets will be scattered broad-cast over every county, and the slanders and charges which they contain must be met and refuted by the Democratic papers. We appeal, then, to Democrats to circulate our paper; if you are a subscriber induce your neighbor to be one too, and let us have the "sinews of war." Give us your aid, democrats, and we promise to do our part of the fight.

VIRGINIA ELECTION.

The returns from the election in Virginia up to the time of going to press indicate losses in many of the eastern counties for Letcher, though in some there are heavy gains. In Richmond City, Goggin falls short of Flournoy's majority by about 500 votes, and in Augusta 700. The result is in doubt.

☞ We have a few things to say about that collection of "incongruous material" known as the Winton Convention, but must defer it to a future time, as we have not space to-day. We have a graphic account of its doings from an eye witness, and our readers may rest assured of knowing all about it before we bid it adieu.

Dr. Shaw's Letter of Acceptance.

Below will be found the letter of the Committee appointed by the Convention to inform Dr. Shaw of his nomination, and that gentleman's letter of acceptance.

The lateness of the hour at which these came to hand prevents our doing more than calling attention to them:

EDENTON, N. C., May 27, 1859.

DEAR SIR:

You were on yesterday unanimously nominated by a large and enthusiastic Convention of the Democracy of the First Congressional District as the Democratic Candidate to represent the District in the 36th Congress of the United States, and the undersigned were appointed a Committee to communicate that fact to you and ask your acceptance, and at the same time to assure you that it is the determination of the Democracy to elect you triumphantly, of which determination the great harmony and enthusiasm which prevailed in the Convention afforded ample evidence even without any direct expression.

Permit us individually to hope that you will accept the nomination thus unanimously conferred.

J. F. SIMMONS,
J. W. MOORE,
B. M. BAXTER, } Committee.

Hon. H. M. SHAW.

CURRITUCK COUNTY, N. C., May 28th, 1859.

GENTLEMEN:—I have received your communication of yesterday informing me that I had been unanimously nominated by a large and enthusiastic Convention of the Democracy of the first Congressional District for a seat in the 36th Congress of the United States, and expressing the hope that I would accept the nomination thus unanimously conferred.

So signal a mark of the continued confidence of my fellow-citizens of the democratic party of this District, which it has been my fortune to serve as a Representative for four years, affords me the liveliest satisfaction; and I accept the nomination now tendered, with a grateful appreciation of the honor conferred upon me.

Should the choice of the Convention be approved by the constituent body, I shall again enter upon a discharge of the duties belonging to that responsible trust with an earnest determination to exert whatever of ability I possess, so as to advance the interests and defend the honor of our District, State and section, and at the same time promote the prosperity, and secure the peace of the whole country, by a strict and uncompromising adherence to the time-honored principles of the State-Rights party, by which and, according to my honest judgment, by which alone, the Constitution can be maintained, the Union of the States preserved, and the happiness and prosperity of the country secured.

Thanking you for the kind manner in which you were pleased to make known to me the action of the Convention, and assuring you of my high regard, I am, very respectfully,

Your friend and ob't. serv't.,
H. M. SHAW.

Messrs. J. F. SIMMONS, J. W. MOORE, B. M. BAXTER, Com.

THEN AND NOW.

There once existed a Whig and Democratic party; these were both great parties, both the exponents of great though different, political principles. The one, the Democratic party, entertained liberal views as to the honesty of the people and their capability to govern themselves.—This party also advocated a strict construction of the Constitution of the United States, and opposed every thing like a consolidation of power in the federal government. It opposed the system of a national Bank, a high protective Tariff, Henry Clay's Bankrupt Law, and most strongly for the extension of Territory, and the accumulation of new States. The other, the whig party, had less confidence in the integrity, the honesty of the masses, and thought it unsafe to entrust them with too much power. In a word, they were for holding the reins of government in their own hands, and of dispensing out liberty as they deemed the people capable of enjoying it. So in all the other principles above enumerated, the old Whig party took issue with the Democrats. Time advanced, the great champions of the parties, who led on the forces to alternate conquest and glory, were snatched by the unrelenting hand of time from the stage of action. One by one the principles advocated by the Democratic party, became engrafted upon the body politic, and established as among the axioms of a good and well regulated government. In their development the country became the wonder of the world. In its growth in wealth, in power, and in greatness it was unparalleled. The old Whig party, true to its principles, fought long and well, but in 1848 it found itself wrecked of every hope of controlling the government, beaten upon every national issue, discomfited, and thoroughly under repair. And when in 1850 the great issue of Slavery arose between the North and South, involving the Constitutional rights of the Southern States in the Territories, it lost its nationality, and with it all its virtue. The Northern wing went over to the Abolitionists and called themselves Black Republicans. The Southern sought out strange gods and worshipped them. It is due, however, to candor, and to the flower of the Southern wing of this old party, here to state, that many of them gallantly came over to the ranks of Democracy, and have since done honor to themselves and the country, by casting the weight of their influence against one of the most dangerous, abominable, and corrupt organizations that has ever had an existence upon American soil. This organization was that of the Know Nothing. It was Black Republicanism, anti-Democracy, and fanaticism in disguise. It was a blow aimed directly at the very organization of society. At one time it threatened to subvert all law, to impair all moral obligations, to shatter our republican institutions to their foundations, and to shake in all its multiform ramifications to its very centre. To carry out its nefarious designs, dark tempies were erected throughout the entire country, and every passion stirred that is known to move the patriot or influence the Christian. Happily, however, for our republican form of government and for its priceless treasures, happily for us as a law abiding, Constitutional venerating, Union loving people, the Democratic party rose up in its strength, and crushed it out.—Winston Sentinel.

MORE OF THE TWO OPPOSITIONS.

We have repeatedly reminded our readers that there are strong evidences of a coalition between the opposition—know-nothing whigs of the South and the black-republicans of the North—for the purpose of beating down the democratic party in 1860, and securing the Federal Administration to this "back-action" compound faction, whose like of love and bond of union is a common hatred to the democracy. We have also pointed out the potent fact that the black-republicans constitute by far the stronger and more powerful division of this opposition, and that, if this combination should succeed in its purposes, they will control the destiny and shape the policy of the new organization, and the anti-slavery element must of necessity hold the ascendency. These premises we have seen denied in no quarter. They are so palpable as to challenge denial. They must be seen and felt by the opposition themselves. It matters not under what leader the opposition forces may be marshalled, whether under Bell or Seward, Crittenden or Fremont, the result of the coalition is alike inevitable—the anti-slavery, black republican element must rule and mould the policy of any administration that may be thus brought into existence. There is no escape from such a conclusion—no means of evading this necessary, logical result.—Political affinity has never been demonstrated to be like chemical affinity, which latter often produces a compound entirely dissimilar from either of the substances which enter into its formation. On the contrary, political affinities or coalitions are produced by the union of stronger and weaker elements—larger and smaller fractions—the result of which must necessarily give to the stronger and larger a preponderance in power and influence over the weaker and smaller. The weaker must be swallowed up, while the larger looms into life and power, full-grown, vital, and defiant. We maintain that the Southern opposition can exercise no influence in such a combination with the black-republicans of the North, save to render the latter more formidable, powerful and dangerous—to feed the fuel of sectionalism and give numerical strength to a faction which is only great in that which is mischievous, wild and fanatical.

And yet the opposition journals of the South are gently and coyly flirting with this overgrown faction, which well-nigh wrecked the hopes of the patriot in 1856 by electing Jno. C. Fremont to the presidency. The Bulletin of this city has declared that it may act with them as individuals—not as a party—so far as to vote for the same man for President. And now the Morning Enquirer declares, in its own language, that 'the election of a black-republican President, in our view, would be no whit worse than the election of James Buchanan, and we should no more think of resorting to revolution on the one account than the other.'

From such declarations as these, emanating from sources so prominent in the ranks of the Tennessee opposition, we are compelled to the conclusion, however unpleasant may be the idea, that the exploded know-nothings, now self-styled opposition, have determined in advance to join their feeble forces with those of the rampant black republican army of the North, to compass the defeat of a party whose success they have denounced as more hurtful than would have been the triumph of Fremont. We cannot appreciate the argumentation which has led to such a conclusion. We can only view with sorrow, and horror, the growth of such sentiments in the Southern States, and among high-toned native southern men. We can only ascribe such an opinion to prejudices, fatalism, or passion. But sure we are the masses will not participate in a sentiment that is contrary to their own education, instincts, associations, and devotion to southern rights. They will not long hesitate, when the alternative is presented to them of supporting the chief and candidates of the democratic party, or the chosen standard-bearer of the sworn enemies of our southern institutions.

THE YOUNG DEMOCRACY OF THE UNION.

It is but natural that the democratic cause should receive the ardent and enthusiastic support of the young men of the United States. Just entering upon the scenes of active life at a time when the country is enjoying the blessing of the wise, pure and vigorous Administration of President Buchanan, and they can scarcely fail to be prepossessed in favor of the party whose history his career illustrates and adorns. Glowing with the generous warmth of youth at the thought of the glorious position which their beloved country occupies among the nations, they cannot but feel grateful for the democratic principles and counsels under whose influence she has been thus elevated. Free from the personal partialities and prejudices, the jealousies and antipathies, of hackneyed politicians, they are prompted to attach themselves to the party by whose collected, deliberate, and enlightened will, the government of this great nation has been guided during by far the greatest portion of its existence. Zealous to press forward in the march of improvement, which is the characteristic of the age and of this nation, they must necessarily belong to the true party of progress—the democracy—and give their cheering support to the illustrious statesmen who are not to be deterred from acting up to the demands of the times and of the people by the clamor of the politicians of the 'stand still' school; but who, with proper circumspection, move onwards with the new combinations that surround them.

Free in their choice, disinterested in their motives, and ingenuous from their years, the young men of the Union may ever be expected to rally around the cause to which their feelings impel them, and which their reason and judgment approve; and we may add that such a union is now demanded of their patriotism, their talents, and their services as may never be required again.—Constitution.

Pending the absence of the Committee, remarks were made by several gentlemen. The following resolutions were reported by the Committee, prefaced by remarks from W. A. Moore, Esq., of Chowan, and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we, the Democracy of the first Congressional District of North Carolina, do declare and reiterate our unshaken devotion to the time-honored principles of the Democratic party, and proudly point to our national progress under Democratic Government as the noblest vindication of our ancient faith.

Resolved, That we are now, as heretofore, bitterly opposed to isms in general, but especially to Federalism, Whigism, Know Nothingism, Black Republicanism, and their mongrel offspring—Oppositionism.

Resolved, That we are in favor of a strict construction of the Constitution as the only safe chart by which to navigate the ship of State.

Resolved, That we are in favor of the present Sub Treasury system as a fiscal agent, and opposed to a National Bank.

Resolved, That we are in favor of the honorable acquisition of the Island of Cuba—the gem of the Antilles.

The following resolution of the Halifax Democracy, was then read by J. F. Simmons:

Resolved, That we cordially and heartily approve of the course of our late Representative in Congress, the Hon. H. M. Shaw, and enthusiastically accord to him the meed of "well done, good and faithful servant."

John W. Moore, Esq., of Hertford, then offered the following resolution, which he advocated in a speech of much force and pertinency.

Resolved, That in the main, we endorse the administrative policy of our distinguished chief magistrate, James Buchanan, and especially his course upon the slavery question—the vital issue of the day.

On motion, the Convention adjourned to half-past three.

3½ O'CLOCK, P. M.

Upon reconvening, on motion of C H Foster, the delegation for the several Counties of the District were instructed to designate gentlemen to cast the vote of their respective Counties. The Counties were then called upon in order, and the result was an unanimous and uncontradicted vote in favor of the re-nomination of Hon. HENRY M. SHAW.

The remarks of those authorized to represent their counties, in casting their united votes for the nominee, gave evidence of the most thorough confidence and the highest enthusiasm for Dr. Shaw. The following is the vote:

The announcement of the vote was followed by the President in an exceedingly felicitious and well-timed speech, which called forth unbounded applause from the vast assemblage present.

E C Hines, Esq., of Edenton, was then loudly called on, who acceded to the desire of the Convention in a brilliant and effective address.

An eloquent and telling speech was then made by W W Peebles, Esq., of Northampton.

L D Starke, Esq., of Elizabeth City, being called upon by acclamation, then ascended the stand, and gave substantial proof that his reputation is well merited as one of the foremost and most efficient champions of the Democratic party.

On motion, the Convention adjourned to meet at 8 o'clock.

8 O'CLOCK, P. M.

J F Simmons, of Halifax, moved that a committee of three be appointed to inform Dr. Shaw of his nomination, and to inform him that we intend to elect him.

The Chairman appointed as this Committee, Messrs J F Simmons, of Halifax; J W Moore, of Hertford; and B M Baxter, of Currituck.

On motion of Mr. Foster, it was resolved that the delegates from each county be requested to appoint three canvassers to canvass their respective counties. The following were appointed:

On motion of L J Johnson,

Resolved, That the Chair appoint two Democrats in each county as an Executive Committee for the district, with all the powers usual to such Committees.

The Chairman appointed the following gentlemen on said Committee:

HALIFAX—Col Nicholas M Long, L H B Whitaker.

HERTFORD—G C Moore, Dr J T Lewter.

J W Moore Esq., of Hertford, was loudly called for, and addressed the Convention, at considerable length and with much ability

W A Moore, Esq., of Chowan, then addressed the Convention in response to repeated call, giving some severe but good-humored thrusts to the opposition.

A forcible speech was then made by L J Johnson, Esq., of Perquimans, in which he scathingly reviewed the history of oppositionism.

On motion of E C Hines, Esq., of Chowan, the thanks of the Convention were returned to the President, Vice Presidents and Secretaries of the Convention, and those of the Democracy of Chowan were tendered to the Democracy of the District for holding the Convention at Edenton.

On motion of L D Starke, it was ordered that the proceedings of the Convention be published in the Democratic papers of the District and in the Raleigh Register.

After a happy address from the President, expressive of his renewed thanks to the Convention for the honor conferred in calling him to preside over its deliberations, and exhorting the Democracy to vigorous and untiring effort to secure the election of the nominee, the Convention adjourned sine die.

IMPORTANT TO AMERICANS GOING TO EUROPE.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—In consequence of the large number of persons visiting Europe, it is considered important to state that persons visiting France from the United States, by way of Havre, must have their passports vised by the French Minister at the port whence they sail. Those who go by way of England to the continent must have passports vised at the office of the American Legation in London. Naturalized citizens applying for passports at the State Department are required to produce their naturalization papers, which will be returned, together with a description of their persons. This is all that is required. Between 40 and 50 passports are issued daily. There were 14,000 issued in the past two years.

FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The Union of to-day intimates that instructions have been sent by telegraph to our Minister in Mexico, directing him to inform the Mexican Government that the Liberal Government has been transmitted by President to Minister McLane; and it is stated that in all probability a treaty between the United States and Mexico will be definitely concluded within thirty days."

DIED,

At the United States Hotel, in the city of Gatesville, on Tuesday 24th inst., of AUGUSTUS SMITH RIDDICK, in the 32nd year of his age.

The deceased was a high toned gentleman, in the fullest acceptation of the term—polite and affable in his intercourse with his fellow man, he won the esteem of all who knew him, and has left behind a host of admiring friends and relatives to mourn over his untimely end.

He was buried with Masonic honors, and now sleeps peacefully by the side of his father and mother, and many of his relatives.

VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE.—

THE subscriber offers for sale his FARM situated in Craven County, on lower Broad and Orchard Creeks, near Neuse River, seven miles from the town of Jackson, containing 2500 acres, more or less, several hundred of which are prime Swamp Land, about 200 acres cleared, the remainder in woods, which is excellent timber, suitable for building or ship purposes.—There are about 100 acres ditched, deadened, under-bushed and the cord wood out; a small amount of labor would prepare it for cultivation. There are also two crops of Turpentine Boxes on it.

The Land is well adapted to Cotton, Corn, Wheat, Potatoes, &c., and is highly susceptible of improvement. The facilities for shipping are rarely equalled.

The improvements consist of a fine large Dwelling, Kitchen, Smoke-House, Gin-House, Barns, Stables, and Negro Houses sufficient to accommodate Fifty Negroes, together with all other necessary out-buildings, in good order. The Garden and Orchard abound in a great variety of the choicest Fruits, viz: Grapes, Figs, Rasp berries, Strawberries, Cherries, Apples, Pears and Peaches. Oysters and Fish may be taken in abundance from the creek at the back of the garden, and Wild Fowl, in great variety, abound in the vicinity.—There is also a good mill site, with dam already constructed on the place. There is a good well of water in the yard.

The premises have the reputation of being healthy and the situation is desirable, and my only object in desiring to sell is the fact that I intend to quit farming.

Persons wishing to buy can apply to me on the premises, or to T. Gooding, sr., at Newbern.

The largest and best stock of Books and Stationery ever offered for sale in the City of Norfolk.

Believing that the wants and the tastes of the people required one establishment similar to those found in the large Northern cities, where a full and general assortment of Books can be obtained, the subscriber has been induced, during a recent visit to Philadelphia, New York and Boston, to purchase from the principal publishers, and at the great "Trade Sales," a superior stock of

School, Classical, Law, Medical, Theological, Religious and Miscellaneous

BOOKS.

Which will, upon examination, compare with any to be found in the Southern country.

A VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE
IN NORFOLK CO., VA.

IT lies on the Dismal Swamp Canal, about 7 miles from Deep Creek and 14 from Norfolk, and contains from 1200 to 1500 acres, about 150 to 200 of which are now in arable order, the balance in original forest.

The soil is adapted to the production of Indian corn and other crops usually cultivated in that section. About 5 or 600 acres of the tract would make as fine a farm as any in Eastern Virginia; adjoining lands of similar quality unimproved, have produced from 14 to 15 barrels of corn per acre, and the wood and timber on the land would pay every expense of clearing, when it would be worth $50 per acre.

It presents, also, great facilities for carrying on the wood business. Immense quantities of the best quality could be sold at paying prices at Norfolk or on the Canal bank, along which the land stretches for several miles. The facilities of water carriage would also render the trucking business profitable.

There is a large Juniper swamp on the tract, valuable for its rail and shingle timber.

The pasturage and range for Stock is unsurpassed. A free School is within one mile of the dwelling. Persons desirous of purchasing are referred to Messrs. George T. Wallace and John West, who live near the place, and to Mr. Benjamin T. Tatem, near Norfolk, who will take pleasure in showing the land.

For further information and terms, which will be liberal, apply to JOSEPH T. TATEM.

INFIRMARY FOR SLAVES.
ELIZABETH CITY, N. C.

THE SUBSCRIBER has opened at the Marine Hospital (in a separate building) an INFIRMARY FOR INVALID SLAVES. He has ample accommodations for a limited number, and will give them his careful attention—supplying them with every necessary their case requires. An Institution of this kind offers many advantages to masters having servants afflicted with chronic or surgical diseases. And, from its economy, they are relieved of the expense and annoyance of having such upon a plantation.

The charges for Board, Medical attendance, Nursing, and Medicine, are $6 per week, payable upon the removal of the patient.

In cases requiring a surgical operation, in addition to the above rates, a fee varying from $2 to $30, in different cases, will be charged for the operation, the particulars of which may be ascertained upon application at the Infirmary.

The services of any other regular Physician will be allowed, at the expense of the master.

Persons in the country desiring to send patients to the Infirmary, or obtain information concerning it, may address the subscriber.

☞ No contagious diseases admitted.
